

Download Crewe Station Traffic And Footplate Working In 1950s Working In The 1950s

(Below) It's well known that dad's favourite photographic location was Crewe North shed (5A), and judging by the number of photographs he took he was regularly drawn to the 70ft turntable at (5A). (Above-Below) Another of Jim's favourite locations was the stretch of WCML just north of Wigan North Western station which involved a stiff climb for northbound trains. (Above) The platform-end clutter at Penrith station has long since gone...an LMS upper quadrant semaphore stands alongside a more modern banner signal, and in the background one of the distinctive LMS pattern 'Hawkseye' station nameboards introduced in 1937. Key to all Issue Numbers Steamindex home page. Issue No. 81 (Winter 2012) Pangbourne station on 30 December 1962. Ian Nash. front cover Covered in thick snow.